Broke His Own Curfew Rules, Wife Charges, Asking Divorce

Special Dispatch to The Star.

PASADENA, Calif., May 25.—Calle F. Smith as a business man, a man of affairs with a position of social prominence, has lived for a number of years in a fine house in the large colony of Pasadena millionaires re-created from all parts of the country.

His family, consisting of his wife, Ivy, and their children, Virginia, nineteen; Velma, sixteen; Valeta, thirteen; and V. Carl, eight, all outward appearances lived in happiness in this home of wealth. They were looked upon by neighbors and friends as a model family.

The head of the family, however, had what might be regarded by the coming generation as an old-fashioned idea of rearing a family and found that things were not going to suit him. He looked upon the handsome cars in the garage as vehicles of business and believed that the head of the family should have always the first call upon their use. This started a discussion which threatened to develop into revolt and defiance. But Mr. Smith, a business man, a practical man of high standing in the community, promptly applied a remedy in a strictly legal form. He drew up an agreement for the conduct of his family and household on December 15, last, subscribed to it and had his wife sign it on behalf of herself and the children.

Terms of Agreement.

The agreement was as follows: "In behalf of the highest welfare and best interests of our home, the peace and unity thereof, and the development of true joy and happiness of each and all members thereof, it is agreed that the father and husband shall be consulted and respected in the mutual and full co-operative performance of the following schedule therein:

"First, religious: A regular and established time for Bible reading and prayer. A regular and established time for Bible study and teaching. A regular and established time for sacred and classical music. Regular and prompt attendance at public services.

"Second, social: Associations and social attendances and connections by permission and mutual agreement. Disavowance of social evils and tendencies and their influences. Proper regulation of physical duties and habits such as sleeping, eating, drinking, and rising by 5 a. m. Prompt, regular and mutual performance of manual and business duties, lies and around the home. Proper use of the automobiles. All social problems to be governed by religious laws and principles.

"Third, financial: Unity in purse and business dealings and transactions. Cooperation and promptness in performance of business duties and obligations. A liberal and agreed per cent set aside and used for religious and charitable work. All financial problems to be controlled by religious principles and regulations."

It was a fine agreement, but now Mrs. Smith comes into court with a suit for divorce and declares in her complaint, charging her husband with extreme cruelty, that the only section of the agreement her husband has not violated is the one pertaining to the religious duties of herself and children.

Under the head of "social," she says he has violated the curfew clause by remaining out until 1 and 2 o'clock in the morning; that he has refused to take her out in the automobile since March, and that he has saved dropped.

Under the head of financial she alleges he took $1,500 from the community purse to trade in his old automobile for a new one, which she has devoted to his exclusive use.

And so on down the line. She tells of the smashing into little bits of the excellent agreement and declares that she has lost all faith in the idea that a family can achieve happiness through a regular lawyer's document of an agreement and asks for liberal alimony and an equal division of the community property.

She says she may have the opportunity to raise her family in happiness in a less formal and more modern way.

It started over the automobile and Mr. Smith still has his classy new car and the privilege of using it all by himself, and also his copy of the agreement as well as some added wisdom that did not come from his knowledge of business or affairs of the world.

OFFICIAL FLOWER OF AMERICAN LEGION NO KIN TO ENGLISH DAISY

INDIANAPOLIS, May 25.—The little white daisy of the American Legion is not even a thirty-second cousin of the English daisy of poetic tradition, writes Walter Fritchard Eaton, author in an article for the Legion, announced by national headquarters of the organization.

The American daisy was adopted by the legion as its official flower after three years of discussion.

The poppy of Flanders, a household word throughout America, was the first choice. They say these poppies grow in fields where blood is shed. They flourish in the English wheatfields about Hastings, where William the Conqueror beat Harold of England 900 years ago in the last conquest of England. They cover the countryside in Flanders, where the English suffered their severest losses during the world war. There was no more than the merest scattering of poppies in the Argonne and about St. Mihiel, where the American doughboys beat back the Germans.

Moreover, this poppy is not a native of America. After its adoption by the legion, it was brought into the country in considerable quantity, and then some experts put out the information that it was likely to spread so fast as to become a pest. The harassed American farmer came forward with a protest, announcing to all the world that he already had troubles aplenty with raising wheat for a falling market, let alone poppies.

Therefore the legion in its third national convention last fall chose the American daisy for its emblem. It is a perennial and thrives under almost any conditions.

Meanwhile the poppy, of more somber memories, has by no means been forgotten. It has been adopted by the American Legion, auxiliary as the memorial flower of the world war.

SAYS PETROLEUM PROVED CHIEF FACTOR AT GENOA

Bolshevik Newspaper Classes

"Rockefeller's Intervention" at Farley as "Tragic Comedy."

LONDON, May 24.—A communique issued by the Russian trade delegation here today quotes the Bolshevik official newspaper Izvestia of Moscow as declaring that Petroleum played the leading part in the Genoa conference, "bringing about scenes which were caused chiefly through allowing Rockefeller's intervention," the newspaper says.

"The second act of the petroleum tragedy-comedy will be continued at The Hague," continues the Izvestia.

"Other questions, like the recognition of 'private' property, were only secondary matters as compared with petroleum, at Genoa."

"Russia was an amused onlooker in this scramble among petroleum imperialists. The Azerbaijan petroleum is firmly in our hands and the oil trust will soon apply to us, not we to them."
